Greetings from Suzanne,

According to Wikipedia, March Madness in the U.S. refers to events surrounding the single-elimination Division I college basketball tournaments each spring. Formerly it was a name given to the NCAA Basketball series.

To me, as a weaver, March Madness means lengthening daylight and the onset of spring. The quality of the bright days gives me more energy, inspiring me to weave more. I can even move one of my smaller looms out to the sunny patio to weave.

I'm hoping March Madness for you will mean that you start working on your 'Use Your STASH Challenge' if you haven't already. I will bring some 'STASH Challenge' forms to the March meeting or you can email me to request one sooner. And, do feel free to call some of the members who have volunteered to be mentors if you want some guidance.

On another note: I registered for Convergence 2014 in Rhode Island! I'll be rooming (we can have up to three people) with Pat Eickman who will be driving. We plan to play tourist for a few days taking in historical New England, where the industrial revolution started in the U.S. That would include Boston, Cape Cod, and for me (of course) a few birds.

Hope to see you all at the March meeting when Carol Bingaman and Janet Castro give us the highlights of their recent textile tour of India.

Weave On!

Suzanne
